“19th Century Numismatic Literature”

Hello, and welcome...to another fixed price list. This time, the older material is offered. Needless to say, these 19th century items are all scarce – some (such as the 1849 Eckfeldt/DuBois work, with ‘49er gold samples, and the Newlin 2nd edition work) have less than ten examples currently known.

The literature market has been relatively quiet for the past several years; that's because those who have this material aren't really interested in selling. They are waiting patiently for the next major library to appear so they can fill holes in their collections. So, here's your chance to do just that!

The Newman Numismatic Portal has been a tremendous benefit for those interested in the history of numismatics in this country – but, they will never get it all – so don't expect that to happen in our lifetimes. A big “THANK YOU” goes out to Eric P. Newman for making this boon to researchers a reality!

A word of advice...get the older items first. They aren't making them anymore – and there doesn't seem to be any more hoards or stashes coming out (at least from what I know after 30 years of chasing this stuff). But then again...ya never know, right?

My current stock is over a thousand different American sales. Feel free to contact me if you need something specific, and I'll let you know if I can help out.

Also, my personal 19th century reference library is for sale. Since the 1980's, I have continually upgraded for completeness and condition. Included are numerous plated, special editions, large paper, priced and named, etc. examples. Two 6' x 3' bookcases barely suffice. If that doesn't seem like a lot, remember these items are old and skinny compared to the catalogues of today. The rarest item is an 1873 large paper, plated, S. W. Chubbuck sale by John Haseltine (his only plated sale). This copy belong to Haseltine's friend, A.M. Smith. It is one of just two known (the other being in the Hamelberg library). I have all four of the other different editions of the Chubbuck sale as well. Anyone seriously interested is welcome to contact me for further details (Price on request).

Please check this list over carefully. It contains some unusual publications that provide contemporary background into the how's and why's of early American numismatics. Considering today's high coin prices, this is perhaps the cheapest, and best, way to enjoy this intriguing hobby.

P.S. – look for an article (by my friend Dave Stone and yours truly) about Matthew A. Stickney's 1804 dollar acquisition in the October 2016 issue of The Numismatist.

A Selection of 19th Century Numismatic Items

Most all of these items are 115 plus years old and will show wear and usage. Serious defects will be noted. The chance to buy these items singly, at the low prices listed, is seldom found anywhere in today's market. Most are one of a kind, so if you want something, just email or call. Also, sprinkled throughout are a few other items of numismatic interest. All items will be sent media mail/insured unless priority is requested. Thanks!
